City seeks input from residents at May 31 and June 1 & 2 open forums regarding retail recreational marijuana
Post Date: 05/24/2016 4:51 PM

The City of Englewood wants to hear from community members regarding whether they support the operation of recreational marijuana retail outlets in Englewood.

Three listening forums have been scheduled to gather input from the community:

- Tuesday, May 31, 2016 • 6 pm • Englewood Civic Center (2nd floor Community Room), 1000 Englewood Parkway
- Wednesday, June 1, 2016 • 2 pm • Malley Center (Ballroom), 3380 S. Lincoln Street
- Thursday, June 2, 2016 • 6 pm • Hampden Hall at Englewood Civic Center (2nd floor), 1000 Englewood Parkway

If you want to weigh in on this matter, please plan to attend one of these meetings. A brief overview of the current status of recreational marijuana in Englewood will be presented at the beginning of each meeting, then the floor will be opened for public comment.

Attendees will be asked for input on whether they want retail recreational marijuana in Englewood, and if so, at what distance from schools, churches, and residential areas.

Background: In May, 2013, City Council enacted a ban on recreational marijuana retail sales, cultivation, manufacturing, and testing facilities in Englewood. In November, 2013, a non-binding advisory question was included on the ballot for Englewood voters to provide feedback on whether they wanted the ban to remain in place. The vote count was 3,593 in favor of keeping the ban, 3,862 in favor of releasing the ban. After considerable debate the City Council decided to retain the ban. In the ensuing years, several City Council members have been contacted by constituents who have stated strong opposition to retail recreational marijuana outlets or grow operations in proximity to their neighborhoods.

City Council has recently been approached by an organization that wants to see the ban overturned. Before any decisions are made, the City Council would like input from the community regarding allowing retail marijuana in the City of Englewood.

Englewood residents who want to weigh in on this matter but are unable to attend one of the forums next week can provide input via an email to webmaster@englewoodgov.org.

City Council is scheduled to discuss the topic of retail recreational marijuana during its Study Session on Monday, June 6, 2016. Feedback should be provided prior to that date.

Sports Authority cutting 461 headquarters jobs

Bankrupt retailer will close Englewood HQ on June 3

By Aldo Svaldi | asvaldi@denverpost.com
May 25, 2016 | UPDATED: 19 hours ago

Sports Authority has made it official: The bankrupt retailer will close its Englewood headquarters and let 461 workers go, according to a notice filed late Wednesday with the Colorado Department of Labor and Employment.

The headquarters at 1050 W. Hampden Ave. will shut down effective June 3 and the jobs will be eliminated on the same day. The people let go include business analysts and planners, buyers, graphic designers, marketers and merchandise managers, as well as a large number of vice-president-level executives.

“Due to unforeseen circumstances, Sports Authority must reduce its business operations and close certain operations of the Englewood Store Support Center on an accelerated schedule,” Douglas Garrett, an interim executive at the company, informed the state in a letter required under the Workers’ Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act.

Garrett wrote that Sports Authority wanted to notify the state sooner, but felt that disclosing any plans to close the headquarters would have hurt its efforts to raise capital and restructure.

“We initially had foreseen maintaining business operations at this location by either locating a buyer or having certain assets and stores purchased during the public auction,” he wrote.

Buyers and outside investors didn’t show the expected interest, forcing the closure.

The layoffs were not unexpected, given the company is in the process of selling or liquidating 460 stores.

Sports Authority had 2,400 employees in Colorado, 772 of them at Englewood corporate headquarters, when it filed for bankruptcy protection in March, company officials said at the time. An earlier round of layoffs in January cut the local workforce by 100, mostly from the corporate offices.

Englewood officials have been bracing for the closure and trying to find other tenants for the two large buildings at the junction of South Santa Fe Drive and Hampden, which are located across the street from CityCenter Englewood, the mixed-use redevelopment of the old Cinderella City Mall.

“This is a terrible blow to our community,” Englewood city manager Eric Keck said last month. “Whenever you lose a primary employer, it has ripple effects throughout the business community. The loss of that daytime population is going to have an impact.”
No joke: A surf spot is coming to Arapahoe County

Victoria Sanchez, KUSA  10:35 PM. MDT May 23, 2016

KUSA - No ocean? No problem. Just in time for summer, a new Colorado surf spot will let you ride the river in Arapahoe County.

The first phase of the publicly funded South Platte River Run Project, including man-made surf waves, will be complete in July. The plan is to revamp a one-mile stretch of river in Englewood and Sheridan near the Broken Tee Golf Course Bridge.

The $15 million project is funded through a partnership with the Urban Drainage and Flood Control District, Arapahoe County, City of Englewood, City of Sheridan, South Suburban Parks and Recreation and the Colorado Water Conservation Board.

Project Engineer Ben Nielsen learned to surf as a college student in California and brought that love of riding ocean waves to Colorado. He works for Merrick and Company, a design group that engineers and designs open channel hydraulics and recreational whitewater.

He said he is among a small group of Colorado surfers who find the few spots along the South Platte River big enough to board.

"You ride on a surf board just like you would in the ocean. I think the biggest difference is, in the ocean you're actually moving with the wave; in the river the wave is stationary," he said.

While surfing at Union Chutes on the river Monday afternoon, he turned heads of bicycle riders and joggers on the path.

"It's a glorious day in Colorado. Got to do something. Might as well surf," said Hugh, a bike rider from Littleton.

The River Run Project will include two man-made wave features, new trails, a playground, beach area, terraces, restroom and parking lot.

"There's really nothing like this on the South Platte River," Nielsen said.
Surfers will be able to enjoy the water near the Broken Tee Golf Course in July. The second and third phases should wrap up by spring or summer 2018.

Visitors will be able to use the area for free. It's not a water park and that means no lifeguards. Nielsen suggests wearing a helmet because the water is shallow and putting on a life jacket before hitting the waves.

"The idea is to be able to come down here with your family on any given day in the summer and be able to surf," he said.

The public project is six years in the making. Besides the new open space and recreation area, flood control structures will be replaced and the river banks stabilized.
Museum of Outdoor Arts to get visit from nomadic museum

Black Cube is excited to present "ROAM," a pop up exhibition by Detroit-based artist Jon Geiger, taking place June-October 2016 in three different locations across Colorado.

Geiger takes his cues from the iconography of the West to construct a tumbling light sculpture. This 26-foot abstracted, animated, white neon tumbleweed consists of five neon tumbleweed structures each illuminated individually to create a rolling movement of light. "ROAM" transforms ordinary materials — steel and neon lighting — to create cinematic plays of light that activate its surroundings. The sculpture is built to move from location to location, and it triggers an array of pictorial possibilities amidst its varying locations.

The exhibition opening event will take place from 7 to 9 p.m. June 11 at the Museum Of Outdoor Arts, Marjorie Park at Fiddlers Green, where the sculpture will be placed on grass across a pond. It will remain in this location from June 11-Aug. 8. "ROAM" will then be moved atop a roof on the campus of the Rocky Mountain College of Art and Design in Lakewood from Aug. 20 to Oct. 17, and its final spot will be in the city of Boulder.

The sculpture is animated to look as if it's in a perpetual roll, and is mounted to a steel frame that references a billboard structure. For Geiger, both the billboard and tumbleweed form are iconic of the American West. Geiger's use of neon light directly references the American West's iconic neon sign history as well as iconic artists who have worked in the West, such as Bruce Nauman.

Geiger received his bachelor's of fine arts in ceramics from the University of Colorado, Boulder, in 2010. He received his master's in ceramics from the Cranbrook Academy of Art in 2014. Geiger's work centers on the mysticism of the American West, the power of land, and the frontier spirit; often challenging their origins and place in the imagination.

Englewood Schools' explores bond request

Funding would be used to rebuild or renovate elementary schools

Posted Tuesday, May 24, 2016 11:59 am

Tom Munds

The Englewood School Board has followed the recommendation of the facilities long-range planning committee and voted to gather information to decide whether to put a bond issue on the November ballot.

If the decision is yes, residents of the school district will vote in November on whether to approve a bond issue for money to rebuild or remodel all of Englewood's elementary schools.

The unanimous decision was made at the school board's May 17 special meeting. Tena Prange, school board president, said the recommendation was to put the bond issue on the ballot. She added that information-gathering should begin immediately because the deadline to put an issue on the November ballot is Aug. 1.

Prange said there are a lot of issues to explore and there could be a need for a daylong board budget retreat. She added that everything is just in the talking stage at this point and the public will be kept informed about the steps the board is taking, with a town hall meeting possible.

Parents, teachers, school administrators and residents volunteered to serve on the facilities long-range planning committee. The 28-member committee was asked to evaluate the district buildings and recommend ways to improve the learning environment and make the schools safer now and in the future.

The committee started work in February. They spent about 20 hours gathering data. One issue was that the four elementary schools and the Early Childhood Education Center all are more than 60 years old. The conclusion was that all aging buildings should be rebuilt or should undergo major renovation.

The committee presented their conclusions and recommendations to the board at the May 17 meeting.

Several committee members presented different aspects of the report, and Duane Tucker, former school board president, presented the committee's recommendation.
“I doubt there is anything in the recommendations that will shock you, he said. “I think you all know the four elementary schools and the early childhood education center are all more than 60 years old, so all these facilities should either be rebuilt or undergo major renovation.”

He said when the schools were designed there was no issue of the need for secure buildings with monitored access, but today’s school safety requirements include secure entrance access. He also noted that most of the aging buildings do not meet handicapped access requirements and, in some cases, cannot be retrofitted to meet such requirements.

He said the school district needs voter approval for a bond issue, and it is the committee’s recommendation the bond issue question be placed on the November ballot.”

At the end of the discussion, Prange said it is the duty of the school board to represent the people; the community has spoken clearly that the safety and security of students is the number one priority; so the board should immediately begin exploring the bond issue question.

Decisions to be made include whether to just seek a bond issue for work at the elementary schools, or also to seek a mill levy override to provide additional funds for day-to-day operations.

The committee report concerning the possible bond issue included very tentative figures for each school and a tentative total cost of about $100 million.

Superintendent Wendy Rubin said that if the decision is to ask voters to approve a $100 million bond issue, the property tax would increase about $6.12 per month for each $100,000 in assessed valuation.
City of Englewood staff will hold three meetings over the upcoming week to gather citizen input on the possibility of recreational marijuana stores in the city.

The city currently has three medical marijuana stores, which are only allowed to sell to medical marijuana patients holding a state-issued card. They are Nature’s Kiss at 4332 S. Broadway, Frosted Leaf at 11 W. Hampden Ave., and the not-yet-open Trees at 5005 S. Federal Blvd.

Englewood residents wanting to provide input on the possibility of recreational marijuana sales, which would be available to anyone age 21 or older, can attend any of these three sessions with city staffers:

- 6 p.m., May 31, Community Room, second floor of Englewood Civic Center, 1000 Englewood Parkway

- 2 p.m., June 1, Peak Classroom at Malley Senior Recreation Center, 3380 S. Lincoln St.

- 6 p.m., June 2, Hampden Hall, second floor of Englewood Civic Center, 1000 Englewood Parkway
The Littleton City Council’s decision last week to ban recreational marijuana sales left the owners of the city’s two medical dispensaries discouraged and unsure of their next step.

“We are beyond frustrated with city council’s vote ...,” said Eric Speidell, who owns The Green Solution along with his brothers, and believed councilmembers allowed personal bias to influence their vote.

“I am disappointed with the outcome ...,” said Stan Zislis, co-owner of Silver Stem Fine Cannabis.

But a majority of the council, responding to a public backlash, worried about social issues brought on by retail marijuana shops.

“I don’t want to be sitting here in a couple of years making a decision about whether we’re going to have smoking clubs,” said Councilmember Debbie Brinkman, who has been the most vocal councilmember opposing recreational sales.

Following a public hearing with comment from dozens of residents, the council voted 5-1 on May 17 to continue the ban it enacted in 2014 that prohibits recreational marijuana shops.

Earlier this year, Speidell and Zislis began a push to overturn the ordinance, hiring Cory Nadler of Black Diamond Outreach to help their cause. Silver Stem Fine Cannabis is on Littleton Boulevard and The Green Solution is on Santa Fe Drive. Both are local chains, with several recreational shops around the Denver area.
The proposal gained the support of other businesses in town and a poll of city residents showed the two sides nearly equal.

However, supporters of recreational marijuana — excluding people working in the cannabis industry — largely stayed home on the night of the meeting, while opponents showed up in force. Most of the people who called or sent emails to councilmembers also opposed the change and urged the council to not be swayed by the prospect of additional tax revenues, which were a large part of supporters’ arguments.

Only Councilmember Doug Clark voted in favor of the ordinance after the public hearing. Councilmember Bill Hopping was absent.

Although he does not personally support marijuana use, Clark said Littleton voters’ approval in 2012 of Amendment 64 — which allowed recreational sales of marijuana statewide — shows that people favor recreational use. Therefore, he said, that indicates they would support those types of sales in the city.

“I think the normal conclusion would be if the citizens voted in favor of recreational marijuana use, that they meant to be allowed to be able to purchase that,” he said.

The other councilmembers weren’t convinced.

“I am not going to support turning the South Metro area into a two-shop retail marijuana mecca,” Brinkman said. “All around us, the communities have said ‘no.’ ”

Mayor Bruce Beckman, a retired police officer, said he voted against the proposal in part because of the federal prohibition on marijuana that remains in place.

“At this point,” he said, “I’m not comfortable voting yes with that kind of situation at the federal level.”

Advocates of recreational sales could still mount an effort to get voters to approve their cause.

But, Nadler said, “at this point we’re not going to speculate on what the next steps are.”
Four years among the cones: Sheridan begins major roads overhaul

By Joe Rubino | jrubino@denverpost.com
May 25, 2016

SHERIDAN — Driving into the city on southbound Federal Boulevard, the signs leap out at you: “Road work ahead.”

The neon orange diamonds will be a fixture around Sheridan through 2020, as will cones and road crews. The tiny municipality of 5,700 in western Arapahoe County is embarking this summer on road, sidewalk and gutter work on a grand scale.

The city will replace more than 50 percent of its streets over the next four years. Another 30 percent will require at least routine maintenance, Sheridan Public Works director Randy Mourning said. The effort — dubbed the DrivingChangeBond Improvement Program — is being paid for mainly through up to $31 million in voter-authorized bonds.

Though not officially part of DrivingChange, the first wave of summer road work is happening now on Oxford Avenue between Federal and Clay Street. The road replacement project, which is using both federal and local money, has complicated getting through the busy intersection and impacted the neighborhood to the south.

More construction headaches are likely ahead, but local officials say community feedback has been overwhelmingly positive, as demonstrated at a project kickoff meeting held on May 11.

“At that meeting everybody was very upbeat and enthusiastic,” said Mayor Dallas Hall. “When they announced that even the alleys would be paved, people cheered.”

Councilwoman Tara Beiter-Fluhr shares that excitement. Road improvements have been a priority of hers since she joined City Council in 2008. She praised residents for approving the bond measure, which passed with 53 percent of the vote in November. The bonds will result in an additional $9.95 per month in property taxes for every $100,000 of a home’s market value over the life of the 25-year bonds.

“I’m just thrilled to see work going on, even if means we’re all navigating cone zones,” Beiter-Fluhr said. “It’s just nice we’re making progress.”

Work got underway this week to replace a bridge over the South Platte River at West Hamilton Place. It uses some bond money, but the real DrivingChange work gets underway in early June.
Early estimates were that work could take seven years, but contractor Kraemer North America condensed it to four, each focused on zones of the city based on need, Mourning said.

Zone 1A, which should be under construction in the coming weeks, includes stretches of West Princeton Place, South Clay and South Irving streets. Zone 1B is the area north of U.S. 285, between the South Platte and Zuni Street, a neighborhood known as “the Bottoms” because of its low elevation.

“This project is going to consist of a total area rebuild including storm sewer, curb, gutter or drain pan, sidewalk and total roadway replacement,” Mourning said of the work expected to begin in July, adding that from an infrastructure standpoint, “It’s the worst area of the city.”

First-year work should continue through November or December, Mourning said.

Fang Wang lives in the Bottoms. He said the city has always been responsive about fixing potholes on his street, but with no drainage, every rain or snowstorm just created more. He is eager to see work get underway.

“I would like to have it done. I think that’s a priority over everything else,” he said. “I’m sure it’s going to increase property values also.”

Hall credited city administrators for making a strong case for bonds to fix Sheridan streets, and residents for supporting it.

Hall said: “I think people are willing to pay for it if the plans are made and it’s done right and leaders are up front about the money and how it will be spent.”
