There's a lot of art to see in 2019, and some of it is already waiting to view, thanks to the wildly popular House of Dior retrospective, still packing them in at the Denver Art Museum (through March 3), and the informative "A Daughter's Eye/A Daughter's Voice" at the Clyfford Still Museum (curated by his daughter, Sandra, and running until Jan. 13).

But the good things don't end there. The Colorado Photographic Arts Center unveils its promising "Personal Visions," on Jan. 10, featuring the work of five Denver military veterans; the MCA hosts a solo of "carved paintings" from Colorado artist Andrew Jensdotter, beginning Feb. 14; and this March will see the return of the sprawling Month of Photography, which fills dozens of venues with the work of artists near and far.

It's gonna be a big 2019, sometimes very big, and it will be interesting, as well. Here are the shows to look for.

1. Natura Obscura," Jan. 11-April 28, Museum of Outdoor Arts

"Natura Obscura" will create interactive environments, several designed by local artists, in the indoor galleries of the Museum of Outdoor Arts. (Daniel Tseng, Special to The Denver Post).

Thanks to Meow Wolf — the wildly successful, interactive art amusement park located in Santa Fe that is also opening a highly anticipated Denver branch in 2020 — immersive art is all the rage. The Museum of Outdoor Arts jumps into the trend, working with the production company Prismajic to transform its indoor exhibition space into a walk-through environment of exotic and surreal scenes meant to spark the imagination. It's an adventurous, high-tech offering from a local institution exploring new ways to connect with the community.

1000 Englewood Parkway, Englewood. Info at 303-806-0444 or moaonline.org. Best to purchase tickets in advance.

2. "Art of the State," Jan. 17-March 31, Arvada Center

Cate Tallmadge's paintings are part of this year's "Art of the State" at the Arvada Center.
(Provided by the Arvada Center)

The Arvada Center stages a third edition of its wide-ranging survey of Colorado art. It's a huge event this time around: More than 550 artists submitted work and jurors selected 154 pieces for the final show. The lineup includes established Colorado names like Chandler Romeo, Gary Emrich, Tony Ortega and Brenda Biondo, plus a sampling of artists who are just establishing their reputation, like Frankie Toan and Ben Siekierski. How interesting is the art here? "Art of the State" offers ample opportunity figure that out.

6901 Wadsworth Blvd., Arvada, 720-898-7200 or arvadacenter.org. It's free.

3. Jordan Casteel: "Returning the Gaze," Feb. 2-May 26, Denver Art Museum

Jordan Casteel has her first major museum show at the Denver Art Museum. This is "Marcus and Jace," from 2015. (Provided by the Denver Art Museum)

Jordan Casteel grew up in Denver, went to Yale, moved to Harlem and become one of the most talked-about painters in the country. And she's not yet 30. "Returning the Gaze" is her first major museum solo and brings her back to Colorado with 30 recent works, showcasing her urban landscapes and boldly colorful portraits created from photos she takes in her New York City neighborhood. Rebecca Hart, DAM's modern and contemporary art chief, curates.

13th Avenue between Broadway and Bannock streets. Info at 720-913-0130 or denverartmuseum.org.

4. "Documenting Change: Our Climate (Past, Present, Future)," Feb.7-July 20, CU Art Museum

Frederick Church's oil painting "The Iceberg," from 1875, will be shown at the CU Art Museum's "Documenting Change: Our Climate." (CU Art Museum)

"Documenting Change" is the kind of deep dive you expect from a museum located at the state's best university museum. It's a well-thought survey that uses hundreds of years of art to tell the story of the churn of our climate. Materials range from massive Romantic-era landscapes to current conceptual works that mine complex sets of data. Of course, artists have recorded this environmental catastrophe our planet faces, and they did it with paint, botanical drawings, photography, installations and more. Co-curated by Erin Espelie and Hope Saska.

1085 18th St., Boulder. Info at 303-492-8300 or colorado.edu/cuartmuseum. Always free.

5. "Aftereffect: Georgia O'Keeffe and Contemporary Painting," Feb. 14-May 26, Museum of Contemporary Art

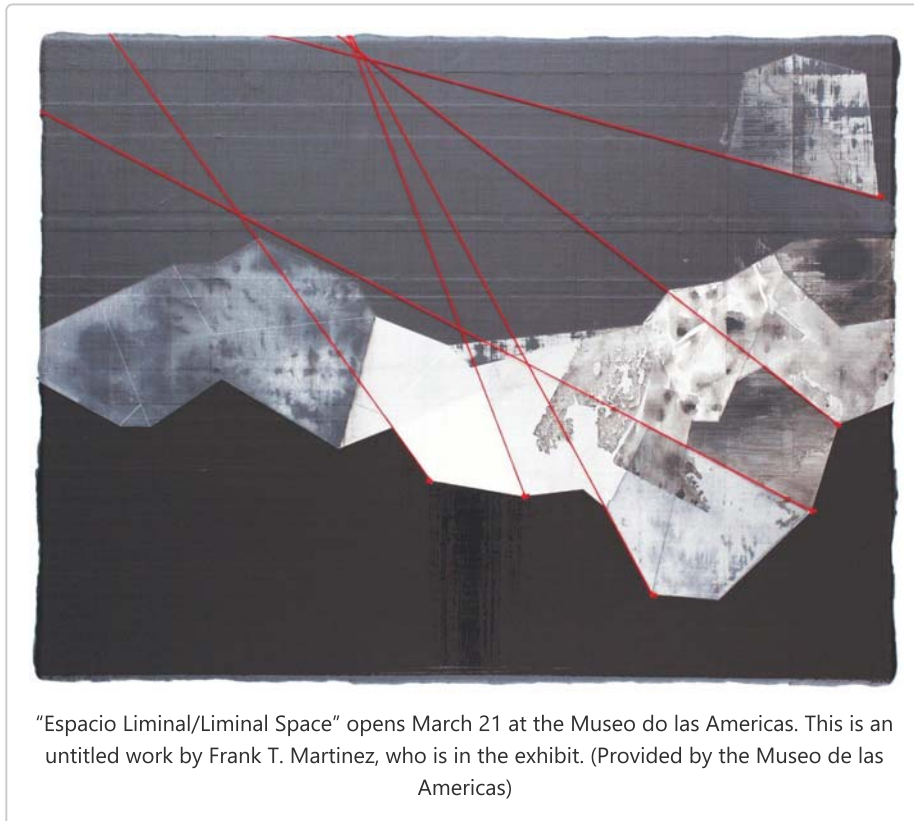

Artist Lesley Vance is part of a group show at the MCA Denver centered around the innovations of Georgia O'Keeffe. (Provided by the MCA Denver)

The MCA, the land of the living, puts the focus on an unlikely subject, Georgia O'Keeffe, for an exhibition meant to show how the 20th century superstar painter influenced the efforts of artists working today. The exhibition, which shines a light on O'Keeffe's experiments with "scale, space, use of color, and framing," mixes eight of her originals with new pieces from Jeffrey Gibson, Loie Hollowell, Gretchen Marie Schaefer, Corey Drieth and others. Curated by Elissa Auther.

1485 Delgany St. Info: 303-298-7554 or mcadenver.org.

6. "Espacio Liminal/Liminal Space," March 21-Aug. 24, Museo de las Americas

"Espacio Liminal/Liminal Space" opens March 21 at the Museo de las Americas. This is an untitled work by Frank T. Martinez, who is in the exhibit. (Provided by the Museo de las Americas)

The Museo de las Americas has a wide-ranging mission that includes showing art from across the globe. This spring it focuses regionally with this exhibition of Colorado artists who will explore the evolution of Latino identity. The show, curated by Frank Lucero, features some of the most interesting artists around, many at the top of their game right now. Coming together for the event: Jaime Carrejo, Frank T. Martinez, George Perez, Diego Rodriguez-Warner, Sierra Montoya Barela, Alejandra Abad and Jacob Gutierrez.

861 Santa Fe Drive. 303-571-4401 ex.25 or museo.org.

7. "Claude Monet: The Truth of Nature," Oct. 20, 2019-Feb. 2, 2020, Denver Art Museum

Claude Monet, "Bateaux de Peche aux Plage d'Etretat," 1883, oil on canvas. (Provided by the Denver Art Museum)

DAM's 2019 holiday season blockbuster couldn't have a bigger name at its center: Everyone's favorite French impressionist, Claude Monet. The exhibition is surely ambitious, with 100 works, drawn from throughout the artist's long career, most exploring his relationship with the wild outdoors. Expect a high level of connoisseurship with material sourced from such esteemed institutions as Paris' Musée d'Orsay, New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art, Boston's Museum of Fine Arts and The Art Institute of Chicago. And expect lots of lilies.

13th Avenue between Broadway and Bannock streets. Info at 720-913-0130 or denverartmuseum.org. Check the website for announcements on ticket sales.
