An investigation revealed that there was an altercation between two individuals, one whom had been camping along the South Platte River under the West Dartmouth Avenue Bridge.

A male suspect, later identified as Delbert Vigil 03/11/1972, had used some type of edged-weapon to stab a twenty-nine year old male victim. Vigil was the one who had been camping in the area, and the victim had been passing through in order to visit another individual who was camping.
