One of the challenges all metropolitan areas are facing in the U.S. today is the human condition of homelessness, and Englewood is no exception. What makes this issue so challenging is that there is no one solution or remedy. Skyrocketing housing costs combined with a lack of wages keeping up with the cost of living are critical factors. Add the issues of familial poverty, lack of educational achievement, lack of affordable mental health care and substance abuse programs, and we have a condition for which none of us are proud.

A year ago, the mayors, city managers and police chiefs of Englewood, Littleton and Sheridan pledged to start working together to create better approaches. We invited Change The Trend (CTT) to the table, whose mission is to mobilize and equip communities to constructively engage the issue of homelessness through organizing non-profits and faith communities for outreach and front-line services. Our focus is on coordinated policy development that enhances solutions rather than exacerbates the challenges.

Our first step in making progress will be a baseline study of who in our midst are homeless. This data will give us a starting point to evaluate effectiveness and success. Then, we can more adequately seek out appropriate resources from the county and state, health agencies, non-profits and faith communities.

While the study will take some time, the city is still actively addressing issues now. Our recent Platte River cleanup of encampments allowed social workers and mental health care workers the opportunity to make face-to-face contact with those experiencing homelessness. Compassionate engagement is key to help members of our community take next steps for a more stable life. Additionally, we are working with the Metro Denver Housing Initiative (MDHI) to create more informed policies and outreach around housing needs.

Finally, our police are utilizing what is called a “co-responder” program. AllHealth Network provides trained social and mental health workers who ride along with our police in an effort to conduct critical assessments and provide resources to those with more social needs. We will continue to fund this program that has already saved over $360,000 in unneeded 911 calls, emergency room visits, and curtailed arrests, which only aggravate the cycle.

Welcome, Shawn Lewis
We welcomed our new city manager in early August after completing a national search for a qualified candidate to oversee day-to-day operations of the city. We are excited to have him at the helm, working closely with city council and staff to implement our vision for a thriving community. See page 6 to learn more about him and join us in welcoming him to our community.

When Bill Clayton is asked why he spends so much time helping the homeless in Englewood, he refers to his own family and their history with homelessness.

Clayton’s father once lived with servants, but became homeless after the Great Depression hit and his poverty-stricken parents died young. They dug their way back out and now Clayton is happy to help others in need.

“I think that’s what you do,” Clayton said. “You can’t turn a blind eye to people who are struggling. I’d like to think if I was down on my luck that someone would help me.”

Clayton, 73, has done many things for Englewood, and he was just named its Citizen-of-the-Year as a result.

Clayton ran for Englewood City Council in 1988 after he sold his restaurant, the Great Western Trading Co. in Littleton. He’s proud of helping the city in that capacity.

He also founded the House of Hope in partnership with Family Tree, an organization that helps families recover from domestic violence and child abuse as well as homelessness.

Clayton went back to school to get a Master’s to learn more about non-profit administration just to make Englewood a good place to raise his two children with Joan, his wife of 48 years.

Clayton may be better known for driving a John Deere tractor once owned by his grandfather, a Utah farmer, in the holiday parade, and he’s fine with that. Clayton is proud of his family’s tough times and how they got out of them, but he also feels fortunate that he didn’t have nearly as many of his own.
MEET ENGLEWOOD’S NEW CITY MANAGER

Shawn Lewis began his role as city manager in August. Learn more about who he is and his vision for the city in the Q&A below.

What do you love about Colorado and Englewood?
Professionally, I love the combination of Colorado's productive work culture and laid back office culture. People value hard work, goal achievement and collaboration, but don't have to wear power suits and step on others to achieve those goals. I've also really enjoyed the mountains and other natural areas of the state. I have a core group of friends that camp, hike and ski depending on the season just about every month of the year. I love Englewood's unique neighborhoods, connection to light rail and transit, warm and welcoming people and the small town feel in the heart of the metro area.

What are your goals for your first year as city manager?
I want to really understand the organization from a strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and threats standpoint. Working with staff, we'll refine and develop short and long term goals for the departments that connect back to city council's vision for the city and create an action plan to move the city forward.

What are your interests and hobbies?
Besides the outdoor activities mentioned above, for the last several years, I've lived in and renovated fixer upper homes which I've usually sold every two years. I really enjoy planning out, constructing and maintaining yards and outdoor living areas. When I was in the third grade, I volunteered to take over the family vegetable garden and flower beds, and by the fourth grade I was hooked on landscaping and gardening. While I still hope to put my passion for all things green into my new home in Englewood, I've bought a house that doesn't need much work so that I can devote my time to being city manager. Plus, my chiropractor tells me I'm getting too old to flip houses anymore!

Can you tell us about your family?
My parents, siblings and seven nieces and nephews live in Texas, and I enjoy hosting some branch of the family at least once a year. I try to make it back to Texas for graduations and family gatherings, but am always ready to get back to Colorado. I also have a cousin who lives in Englewood and look forward to spending more time with him.

We’ve heard you enjoy volunteering – which organizations do you volunteer with?
I was a driver with Longmont Meals on Wheels for six years, and I also mentor an at-risk student through the I Have a Dream Foundation of Boulder County. My mentee and I were matched when he was in fourth grade, and he’s now a freshman in high school! I’ve committed to finishing off his high school career as his mentor. I’ve also been the service director for my local Rotary Club for five of the last six years and have been a member of Rotary for nearly 20.

THE ENGLEWOOD DAY CELEBRATION

Englewood Day, the city’s first annual celebration, started in September of 1930 as a way to raise money for local families struggling in the Great Depression. It eventually became a city tradition that residents and visitors looked forward to every year.

The festivities were elaborate and included parades, a carnival, amusements, moving pictures, concerts, a fortune-telling booth, a horse race, Shetland pony rides for the kids, a Japanese tea shop, music, dancing and a vaudeville performance in city hall.

The event was well known and attended, attracting people from Denver and across the state. With just about every local business, club and civic organization participating, $1,500 was raised in its second year, a substantial amount of money in that era.

For many, the parade was the highlight of the event, at times featuring more than 100 colorful floats, the firemen’s band, the Denver Shriner’s band and high school marching bands, along with well-known local public officials and politicians.

ENGLEWOOD CREATES

How do you get Englewood’s creative and innovative minds all in one room? On May 23, the City of Englewood hosted Englewood Creates: Be Creative, Build Resources, Bridge Communities, an evening event that offered local Englewood area creatives, artists, and arts-driven small businesses an opportunity to meet, connect and collaborate. Englewood Creates is a collaborative effort between the City of Englewood’s Economic Development Program and Black Cube Headquarters.

Pop-Up Concerts
On a Saturday morning in late June at the South Platte RiverRun Trailhead, a couple of bikers decided to go dancing instead.

With their helmets still on, they danced at the small pop-up concert to the Dean Hirschfield Trio. It was a proud moment for David Carroll and Leabeth Pohl, chair and vice-chair, respectively, for the city’s cultural arts commission.

The concerts are part of the commission’s new unexpected art campaign, “It’s those unexpected art moments that make your city unique,” Pohl said.

Meet and Greets
When Carroll and Pohl attended a creative conference in Greeley a couple years ago, one of the guest speakers asked them a question: Who are the creatives in your town? Carroll and Pohl didn’t know, but they wanted to find out.

They’ve since hosted four meet and greets, and the idea is for artists to introduce themselves to each other, residents and, of course, the members of the arts commission and the city.

The city started with a mailing list of 35, and after a networking event called Englewood Creates Day, they had more than 115 artists.

That list will help the commission send out calls for action, including giving bar and restaurant owners a way to display artwork as well as give the commission artists to call on for its growing list of public art projects.

Swedish Horses
Art can do more than just provide something nice to look at while you’re in between Facebook posts. It can define a business district, a park or even a community.

That’s the goal of the 11 Swedish horses that the arts commission hopes to have installed by the end of the year from the CityCenter all the way to Swedish Medical Center on a route that includes Englewood Parkway to South Broadway.

The horses all look the same, but artists would paint them and decorate them to make them unique.

The commission still needs to raise about $45,000 to pay artists to paint the horses and install them, and they hope businesses will sponsor a horse for $5,000. That money could give the business a chance to work with the artist and even select its own while increasing its visibility.

generous budget and support.

But David Carroll and Leabeth Pohl wanted more. The commission calls it the unexpected art moment, a time when residents might stumble across art, like a free concert, a mural or a painting on a public structure. It’s a philosophy that’s driving many Colorado cities as they decide how to invest their art dollars. Carroll, the commission’s chair, and Pohl, its vice-chair, were as good as any to lead it for Englewood.

Pohl opened Leabeth’s Kitchen, a catering company. Four years ago and calls herself a culinary artist, not a chef, even though she learned how to cook at age 10 at her father’s elbow. “I like making things look pretty. I don’t just put food on the platter,” Pohl said.

That helps her relate to artists, she said, and led her to apply for the arts commission during her first year of business, when it was considerably slower. She now has a goal to open a breakfast and lunch cafe.

Carroll worked as the executive director for art galleries in places such as New York, Seattle and Washington D.C. before moving back home to Englewood six years ago to care for his ailing father. By the time his father died, his wife, Leona Dillon, had a great job as an accountant for a construction company and didn't want to leave.

He applied for the arts commission to keep him busy and eventually found a way to tie his experience with the arts into a job as executive director with the Greater Englewood Chamber of Commerce. Carroll considers “placemaking” a core philosophy, “I think one of the reasons they found me interesting was because of that tie in to placemaking,” Carroll said. “That’s where you use creatives to create an identity for the city.”

“We’ve been trying to do things for so long,” Carroll said. “We really wanted to look at the broader picture. Public art can brand your city in a unique way. It can create community.”

“Public art can brand your city in a unique way. It can create community.”

In the past, the Englewood Cultural Arts Commission’s main job, and some would say its only job, was to decide what sculpture to buy in the city’s One Percent for Art program.

It wasn’t a tiny task. The program ensures that the city spends one percent of its capital construction budget on new artwork, and finding pleasing pieces of art that would impress the majority of Englewood residents was problematic, even with the city’s generous budget and support.

Help Shape the Future of Englewood’s Cultural Art Experiences

A steering committee of commission members, cultural organizations, city staff and local creatives are now actively working on an Arts Master Plan, a strategic planning process to guide art initiatives in the Englewood community. Residents are invited to participate in an online survey that will help shape the future of cultural arts in the city for years to come. Take the survey online now: surveymonkey.com/r/SJ6GGNV

A FAMiLY RestAURANT YEARS In THE MAKING

Zomo

Alycia Davie always had one question for her grandmother after she savored another meal: Grandma, why don’t you have your own place?

Chi Nguyen did own restaurants, but that was in small Kansas towns as a refugee from Vietnam, not in Englewood, where she moved with her husband, Ty, and her son, Son.

Son, 17, then met Kris, 18, who was working three jobs and living in a motel with her two daughters. They became a mixed but large and happy family.

Alycia loved her father and grandparents so much; she told her friends she was half Vietnamese even if her ancestry said otherwise.

Alysia loved her father and grandparents so much; she told her friends she was half Vietnamese even if her ancestry said otherwise.

Andersen, 28, opened Zomo in late May in downtown Englewood’s historic district at 3457 S. Broadway using Chi’s cooking and recipes. On the menu, there’s Ma’s Stir Fry, shrimp skewers from Grandpa Ty and the egg rolls Chi made by the thousands to sell at the Kansas State Fair to pay for her first restaurant.

Several years ago, when the popular El Tepehuian relocated a block south after 40 years, Ryan’s mother, the landlord, asked Ryan and Alycia if they wanted to open a place. Alycia saw her dream of giving her grandmother a place to cook become a reality.

They needed to scrimp, and so they and a crew of a dozen family members worked for three-and-a-half years to get it ready. Ryan, a mechanical engineer, oversaw the design with his father. When they didn’t know how to do something, they searched YouTube videos. They even put off their wedding to get it done. Englewood gave them a $20,000 redevelopment grant, the highest in the city’s history. And finally, they opened in late May.

Many family members work there now, including Kris, who waits tables, and Alycia’s younger brother, who bartends.

Chi measures by the pinch, not the tablespoon, and learned how to cook by watching her friends and family. So Alycia and Ryan strapped a GoPro camera on Chi’s back to watch and record what she does.

“They say if your intentions are good, then good things will follow,” Alycia said, “and the only thing I want to do is give my grandmother a place to share her food with everyone else.”

Ryan has those recipes locked away, or a close approximation of them, anyway, but not now, Chi still makes the sauces and marinades and other flavors before her five Vietnamese cooks take over.

Alycia is glad for the opportunity to create a restaurant for her grandmother. “I just think I got lucky,” she said. Chi smiled. “We both did,” she said.

ANSWERING THE CALL

Englewood PD finds success, savings in Co-Responder Program

The Englewood Police Department began deploying a unique team of professionals to respond to calls for service when mental health or substance abuse is the primary reason for the call.

The Critical Incident Team’s Co-Responder Program works to identify individuals who would be better served by connecting directly with mental health, substance abuse and/or behavioral health services. Currently, the program provides two levels of response:

- Primary response includes co-responders embedded in the police department, responding to dispatch calls with law enforcement to provide mental health and substance abuse support during the call for service.

- Secondary responders provide telephone support, follow-up and can provide assistance navigating referral agency options if a co-responder is not available.

In the first eight months of service (July 2018 - February 2019), a co-response team was utilized 332 times. When a co-responder was available, individuals were diverted away from the hospital emergency room or jails. 79% of the time and were treated in place, sent to a walk-in clinic or placed in detox instead. It is estimated that the Co-Responder Program has saved over $350,000 in emergency room and jail visits in just the first eight months.

“In all of my years serving Englewood, this is the most significant program that I can recall that has had such a positive and beneficial effect on our community,” stated Englewood Police Chief John Collins.

School Board Election Information
This November, Englewood Schools will have two of five seats up for election on its school board. Board of education members are unpaid volunteers who make important decisions about the way the school district is run. All members are at-large, meaning every citizen in Englewood can vote for any candidate. To learn more about the election and candidates, visit englewoodschools.net/election.

WE ARE THE (TREE) CHAMPIONS

Our city is home to an abundance of beautiful trees but only six have the official title “Champion Trees” as designated by the Colorado Tree Coalition. A Champion Tree is the largest tree of each species determined by measurements from its spread, height and trunk circumference.

To keep our tree history growing (pun intended), we need your help to properly care for Englewood’s urban tree canopy:
• Keep trees and shrubs pruned to retain health
• Maintain visibility of traffic, street signs and traffic signals
• Provide routine care and maintenance
• Remove dead, dying or diseased trees or shrubs from your property
• Ensure clear pedestrian access on any property-adjacent public sidewalk, street or alley

Free resources are available through the Colorado State Forest Service to help you care for your trees. Visit https://cfs.fs.colostate.edu/colorado-trees/ for more information. Failure to comply is a violation of the city’s municipal code. Englewood’s full ordinance for the care and maintenance of trees is covered in the city’s municipal code under Title 11, Chapter 5.

Each candidate must be nominated by petition signed by at least 50 registered electors residing within the municipality, or the district, from which the officer is to be elected. The petitioning process takes place in August. Only petitions obtained from the city clerk’s office may be circulated.

Nomination petitions will be available in the city clerk’s office beginning August 6. August 26 is the last day to file petitions and the city clerk must receive them by 5:00 PM. Watch for more information on the 2019 candidates in September. This will be a mail ballot election coordinated with Arapahoe County. Ballots will arrive in mailboxes mid-October.

ENGLEWOOD CONSIDERS REGULATIONS FOR SHORT-TERM RENTALS

Englewood, like many cities in the Denver area, is currently experiencing a number of residential houses being partially or completely rented out as short-term rentals (STRs) on a daily or weekly basis. These STRs are often rented through popular websites such as VRBO, Airbnb, etc. Under Englewood’s current municipal code, these rentals are illegal, but there has been some discussion to change that.

The City of Englewood’s zoning code currently states that a property rented out for less than 30 days is considered a “visitor accommodation”. Visitor accommodations are currently not permitted in any residential districts of the city. View a city map of the areas where visitor accommodations are allowed online at englewoodco.gov/government/city-departments/community-development/short-term-rentals.

SHARING THE ROAD

New bike lanes on Dartmouth Avenue promote safety and connections

In late July, a project to add new designated bike lanes to Dartmouth Avenue between Inca Street and South University Boulevard began. The bike lanes will improve safety by creating predictable behavior and movements between bicyclists and motorists.

They also create better connectivity to the regional trail network and link riders to Denver’s bike system and the Mary Carter Greenway.

EVERY DROP COUNTS

Utilize rain gardens to conserve and clean our water

Rain gardening uses a thoughtful landscape design that maximizes one of our most precious resources—water. Englewood’s urban landscape causes snow and rain runoff to pick up pesticides, animal waste, oil and gas from driveways and roads. This and other debris enter overburdened sewer systems, which end up in our rivers and lakes.

With rain gardens, this water runoff is slowed and captured in slightly sunken areas that are heavily mulched and contain native and perennial plants, grasses and flowers. They add beauty and habitat for pollinators while the root system filters and cleans our water.

Rain gardening helps reduce the need for lawn watering and cleans the runoff that eventually enters our water system. A win-win for water conservation and water quality!

Explore online resources to build your own rain garden. Visit stormwatercenter.colostate.edu.

EVERY CHILD READY TO READ

At Englewood Public Library we believe that public libraries can have an even greater impact on early literacy through an approach that focuses on educating parents and caregivers using everyday skills such as:

- TALK
- PLAY
- READ
- WRITE
- SING

Learning to read begins at birth. Parents and caregivers can reinforce and help grow brain connections through these five practices that will help a child develop the foundation needed to read. Practiced regularly, these activities will help a child develop and be prepared to learn to read.

Book Recommendation
The Knife of Never Letting Go
by Patrick Ness

Todd Hewitt lives in a new alien world in which all women are gone, and the thoughts and minds of men and animals are constantly audible as Noise. Noise is an oppressive chaos of words, images, and sounds that makes human communication exhausting and no thought truly private. (Imagine living in a world where you could hear every living thing's thoughts and moods!) Todd and his dog Manche are on a walk one day when suddenly they hear something... They hear NOTHING! SILENCE! Soon this silence will show Todd the truth and send him out into the new world wondering if everything he has known is a lie.

Liz, the Teen Librarian’s Review: I loved this book! Not only does this dystopian novel have a unique perspective, it is action packed and keeps you on the edge of your seat! There are three books in this series, and a movie titled “Chaos Walking” just came out earlier this year. This is a great pick for those who enjoy dystopian and science fiction and all around adventure and mystery!
