Night of the Stars Auditions
On Saturday, January 25, 49 talented young people (grades K-12) showed off their acts for the Night of the Stars at the Englewood Recreation Center. Students competed in their age groups in the Voice, Music and Variety categories. Judging for the state competition begins on February 21 at Hampden Hall starting at 6pm. The state competition will be held at Chatfield High School on March 8.
Update on Pump House and Wet Well Project
The remaining water in the wet well has been pumped out in preparation for a new sleeve pipe to be inserted inside of the existing pipe. The pump house project is on hold until there is further inspection of soil stability and compaction for concrete footings.

New Drainage Lines on Driving Range
A contractor has been selected to install new drainage lines on the driving range tee. There are several areas on the tee that have difficulty sustaining turf/grass due to water standing both above and below the surface. Placing French drains in these areas on the tee will redirect this water away and ultimately allow grass to grow in these areas. Mobilization of equipment and materials is near completion, but snow is creating difficulty for the project to begin.

Heirs cry foul, say two Colorado probate lawyers depleted their estates

By David Olinger
The Denver Post (mailto:dolingr@denverpost.com?subject=The Denver Post)

Four families with cases in Arapahoe County's probate court say that two attorneys involved in their estates should have disclosed a real estate investment they made together before charging the estates at least $400,000 in fees.

Colorado's disclosure requirements for attorneys generally do not extend to family members of clients, experts said. But the attorneys' joint investment concerned the district's chief judge enough that he issued an order in April that they could not be involved in the same estate cases without court approval.

Last week, the judge ordered one of the attorneys, court-appointed public administrator Tamra Palmer, to advise him of any cases since April in which she has participated with lawyer Jennifer Gormley. Palmer responded that there are four such cases but that she was appointed to each before the judge's April order.

Palmer and Gormley say they are precluded by confidentiality rules from discussing any probate cases. However, each has said they have no conflict of interest. Palmer has told the court the relationship did not influence her decisions and that she had no obligation to disclose her real estate investment with Gormley.

Cliff Battista, who was trustee of his father's estate, said Palmer knew about him being removed, then, as Gormley's recommendation, took his place as a court-appointed trustee.

Both lawyers then billed the estate for their work on the case.

"I'm appalled that people have the audacity to do that to someone else," he said.

Offices six steps apart

In July 2010, Palmer, Gormley and a third attorney bought a building for their offices and other tenants in Greenwood Village after borrowing $1.5 million.

Palmer and Gormley pledged houses they own as collateral. They agreed to be jointly and separately liable for the loan. They now work in offices six steps apart.

Colorado's rules of professional conduct for lawyers forbid representing a client if that creates a conflict of interest.

But the terms defining a conflict leave room for interpretation. For example, a conflict exists if "there is a significant risk that representation of one or more clients "will be materially limited" by, among other things, "a personal interest of the lawyer."

The Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel, which governs the conduct of lawyers in Colorado, says judging what constitutes a conflict can be a challenging task, requiring a close examination of the facts involved in a particular case.

In many cases, the rules "are very difficult," said Jamie Sudler, the office's chief deputy. "What you're analyzing is what's in the lawyer's head."

A shared business interest doesn't necessarily create a conflict, he said, and disclosure requirements to clients generally do not extend to family members. Asked about a situation where one lawyer is recommending the other for court appointments or approving the other's bills and they have made an investment together, "that's a twist," Sudler said. "That might make a difference" as to whether a conflict exists.

Palmer responded in an e-mail to questions from The Denver Post. "When I am appointed as a fiduciary, I perform my duties in a neutral and unbiased manner and in accordance with the laws of the state of Colorado," she said. "I am unable to respond to the perceptions of parties connected to those cases."

"Because of the law and rules of confidentiality in probate matters, I am restricted from commenting or answering your questions concerning specific probate cases," Gormley wrote in an e-mail.

She noted that the court is aware of her business relationship with Palmer. "Our ownership in the building is a matter of public record and is not a secret," she said.

The investment, however, prompted the April order by Arapahoe district court's chief judge, William Sylvester. And after inquiries by The Post, Sylvester and Timothy Fasing, the district's probate judge, took additional action.

On Jan. 16, Judge Fasing noted in Palmer's records "entries reflecting payments to attorney Jennifer Gormley" since April, and he ordered Palmer to explain how that conformed with Sylvester's order.
The next day, Sylvester issued an order telling Palmer to advise him of any cases since April "that she has dually participated in with attorneys Jennifer Gormley and/or Cheryl Miller," the third investor in their building.

Palmer responded in writing on Friday that she and Gormley have participated in four cases since Sylvester's April order, but that her appointment to those cases occurred prior to the order.

"It is my understanding that those cases do not require a stipulation or additional court order," she said.

Palmer did not receive a copy of the April order until last week, she said, but she had met with Sylvester in April to discuss her business relationships.

"I was not in any way attempting to avoid or circumvent the order. I just wasn't aware of it," Palmer said.

Living modest lives

Cliff Battista says his parents, Nick and Rose, led modest lives to save money for their four children.

They clipped newspaper coupons. They overlooked the fraying carpet in their Littleton home. They kept mismatched sets of glasses in the cupboards.

After Rose died, though, Nick grew unhappy with his eldest son, Carl, and disinherited him. Where Carl and his sister Cindy Long angrily confronted their father, he disinherited Cindy, too, according to Cliff Battista and his lawyers.

Cindy Long hired Gormley to reclaim her share of the estate. The lawsuit split the family and led to costly litigation.

In court, Gormley alleged that Nick "suffered from an insane delusion" when he created and amended the family trust and that Cliff Battista had unduly influenced him.

Gormley called a family friend as an expert witness, who testified that Cliff Battista had misspent trust funds. Upon Gormley's recommendation, the judge removed Cliff Battista as the trust administrator and replaced him with Palmer as trustee of a $732,187 estate.

Stanton Rosenbaum, an estate lawyer in Denver, questioned that arrangement.

"That doesn't pass the smell test. I'm surprised the judge allowed that," he said. "You've got a potential conflict right there."

Not until last April, when Palmer was required to answer questions in court, did the family get a detailed account of her business relationship with Gormley. By then, much of Nick Battista's savings had been spent in the legal battle.

Cliff Battista provided documents showing Palmer collected more than $350,000 in fees from the estate in three years.

Cindy Long, who now regrets hiring Gormley, said her attorney and an associate amassed more than $200,000 in fees, then reduced them as part of a settlement.

She is uncertain of her exact payment, but "the pressure of the attorneys' fees was tremendous," she said. "It took a toll."

"They don't tell people they have this relationship," said Tina Spencer, the Battistas' other daughter. "People get caught off guard. Once they get a foot in the door, you can't get rid of them."

At the April hearing concerning the attorneys' joint investment, Palmer denied she had a conflict of interest or an obligation to disclose her investment with Gormley.

"No," she replied when asked by an attorney for family members about a potential conflict. "I have a job as a fiduciary to do my job as a fiduciary."

Palmer has served as Arapahoe County's public administrator for 12 years, a court appointment to distribute the assets of a deceased person who did not designate anyone to do so in his will. She also gets appointed by Judge Fusing as a conservator managing estates of people deemed incapable of handling their own money.

In Colorado, the court administrator's office oversees the district courts. Carol Haller, its legal counsel, said Judge Sylvester sought her advice before issuing his April order. In general, when attorneys are appointed by a court, "we expect them to act with due regard that they are an arm of the court," she said. "We expect them to avoid improprieties and even the appearance of impropriety."
Palmer's appointments often follow recommendations from the Arapahoe County Department of Human Services, which petitions for guardians and conservators for disabled people, and from Virginia Horton, the assistant county attorney representing the department.

Gormley has entered probate cases as a plaintiff's attorney, a guardian's attorney and the attorney for a ward of the court.

Their joint investment dates to July 30, 2010, when a company called Urt LLC bought the 12,882-square-foot ranch-style building at 6060 S. Greenwood Plaza Blvd. for $1.427 million. Urt had borrowed $1.239 million the previous day to facilitate the purchase.

State records list Gormley as the registered agent of Urt LLC. In her court testimony, Palmer said she, Gormley and Miller each own one-third of the building.

"They spent his money"

Edward J. Baker enlisted in the Navy right out of high school in Illinois and retired as a lieutenant commander and master scuba diver with dozens of medals and commendations for his service, which included classified missions.

In 2007, he suffered a stroke and two years later went to live with a sister in Colorado while getting rehabilitation treatment. In 2010, the county human services department successfully petitioned the probate court to make him a ward of the court. The rehabilitation center chose Gormley as Baker's attorney, and Palmer was appointed conservator of his assets, according to Carol Fox, Baker's sister in Illinois.

Fox said when Baker visited his daughter in California, his court-appointed protectors — including Gormley, Palmer and a guardian — obtained an order to have Baker's sister in Illinois and a court-appointed protector to keep Baker in Colorado. Repeatedly, "they spent his money," she said.

Baker, 55, now lives in a single room in an assisted-living home. He lives and receives $79,870 a year for his care from state and federal funds, which includes classified missions.

Baker's sister in Illinois, Eleanor Lewis, said, and hired Gormley to defend her guardianship appointments often follow recommendations from the department.

"Ed misses his family terribly," said Fox, who calls him every day. "He's so sad."

In court hearings, she said, "nobody would let him speak."

Palmer's expense reports, which she submits to the court for approval, show that in two years, she received $58,927 and Gormley received $70,870 from Baker's estate. Those fees, as well as payments to other lawyers, Baker's guardian and the facilities where he was kept, exhausted nearly all of a $637,640 estate from 2010 to 2012.

In her reports, Palmer attributed many expenses to extensive litigation with Baker's sister in Colorado.

Palmer charged $210 an hour for her services, a rate approved by the court that several local probate attorneys said was a reasonable charge.

In 2012, according to court records, she served as conservator, trustee or personal representative of a deceased person for 11 estates in the judicial district and charged a total of $310,851 in fees and costs.

Worried about scams

Eleanor Lewis held an estate valued at nearly $2 million when, at the age of 82, she began to show signs of dementia. Family members and friends worried she had become vulnerable to financial scams.

She was living with a grandson in her home of 52 years, and other family members offered to help care for her. But the county human services department proposed a professional guardian and conservator. A court-appointed lawyer agreed. Valerie Crider became Lewis' guardian. Palmer, who had started helping one of Lewis' sons manage her money, took over as conservator.

Two of Lewis' other children said that when they objected to their mother's care, alleging she was being drugged unnecessarily, Crider restricted their ability to visit their mother in their childhood home. Crider also required a supervisor to be present during visits, raising the costs of care, they said, and hired Gormley to defend her guardianship work.

Crider said she could not discuss the case because it is confidential.

Lewis' remaining assets include a ranch in Elbert County bought by her husband, who died before he could retire there.

Janet Van Vliet, one of Lewis' daughters, provided a spreadsheet of expenses derived from Palmer's interim accounting reports from 2009 until early 2013, along with the reports. Those showed Palmer had received $56,000 in fees, while more than $210,000 was spent on guardianship services and reimbursements. About $41,000 of the guardianship charges went to Gormley in one year.

In all, the costs charged to the Lewis estate, which also included 24-hour care and ranch maintenance, totaled $1.3 million.

Van Vliet said Palmer recently notified the family that the ranch will be sold to pay for their mother's continued care.

"It was just shocking every time we would get a report," she said.

Chester "Skip" Morgan represented three of Lewis' children fighting the restrictions on their ability to visit their mother. "It was troubling" to learn that Palmer and Gormley had a joint real estate investment, he said.

Gormley and Horton "presented a united front," he said, "on behalf of Valerie Crider and Tamra Palmer, who involved herself in the visitation issue and litigated, even though she was the conservator."

Horton also said she could not discuss individual cases. In general, she said, Palmer is one of several people nominated as conservators because she is experienced and charges a modest hourly rate.

"I have never nominated Jennifer Gormley to serve as a fiduciary," she said, "(and) neither Ms. Gormley nor Ms. Palmer is a personal friend."

Horton and Halev McKean, a spokeswoman for the county human services department, said families are sometimes to blame for driving up the costs of a probate case.

"The more conflicted, the more pleadings, the more the fees of the professionals increase," Horton said.

McKean said family members can abuse or harm at-risk adults, although she was not speaking about the Lewis case. "Relatives can be toxic," she said.

Neighbors' water

Larry Parr grew up on Arapahoe County farmland that, over decades, turned into light-industrial acres off Santa Fe Drive. His mother, Emma, held an estate worth $850,000.

Parr, who still lives on the land and owns a recreational-vehicle storage business there, said his inheritance dwindled quickly after he complained about a guardian's treatment of his mother, and the guardian hired Gormley.

The conflict climaxed when he withheld payments to the facility she lived in, alleging improper care. Gormley petitioned the court for an emergency order, saying Parr's mother was about to be evicted.

In 2011, "Gormley suggested to Judge Fasing to relieve me as trustee of the estate and to appoint Tamra (Palmer) in my place," Parr said, and Fasing did.

With court approval, Palmer sold family land along Union Avenue in Englewood to a competing business, handlocking Parr's site, he said. The new owner found that a water line crossed his land to Parr's house and shut the water off on Thanksgiving Day.

"We are living on water we store in 5-gallon buckets that we get from our neighbors," he said.

Parr appealed unsuccessfully to Fasing to have Palmer removed as conservator and trustee of his mother's estate.

He has been unable to find out the total amounts Palmer charged, but said he has paid more than $200,000 in legal fees.

On Jan. 16, Gormley petitioned the court for payment of $263,260 in fees and costs accumulated by Emma Parr's guardian and Gormley's office. The court has not yet acted on the petition.

Probate court

A look at the players in estate cases:

Probate court judges: Oversees estate cases and appoint conservators and guardians for wards of the court.

Wards: Are deemed in need of protection because they are incapacitated, at risk of abuse or under disability.

Guardians: Are appointed by the court to protect the health and welfare of a ward. A guardian can be a family member or a professional guardian.

Conservators: Are appointed by the court to manage the finances and assets of a ward. A conservator can be a family member or a professional conservator.

Public administrators: Are court appointees who may be asked to distribute a deceased person's estate as its personal representative when no will exists, when no family member is willing and available to serve as executor, or when a will is contested. A public administrator also may be appointed to manage a ward's financial affairs.

Englewood, CO 80110

Dear Mayor Penn and Englewood City Council Members:

Thank you very much for your financial support of $175 for the Arapahoe County Mayors and Commissioners Youth Award Program.

Your support sends a strong message to the Arapahoe County youth that you believe in them. In 2014 we hope to offer every senior nominee a college scholarship. We appreciate your generosity.

Sincerely,

Nancy A. Doty, Chair
Board of County Commissioners
Dear Friends:

All of us at the Santa Claus Shop want to thank you for your contribution of $250.00. Your financial support helped provide books and toys for many, many children this past Christmas.

Due to the generosity of people in the community like you we were able to provide toys and books to all the children, who are referred to us in Arapahoe County, in the cities of Englewood, Littleton and Sheridan. The volunteers work tirelessly collecting, sorting and restoring gently used toys and books. This labor of love exists for the sole purpose of offering the fullest compliment of toys and books for these needy families in their choice of the ideal gift for their children.

We hope you will keep us in mind as you consider your future donations and volunteer efforts. As we mentioned, we are always seeking enthusiastic volunteers with fresh ideas. Please tell your family, friends, and neighbors about this worthy opportunity to help those in their community.

Again thank you for helping all of us brighten Christmas for those in need in our community. Because of donors like you, The Arapahoe Santa Claus Shop is able to successfully provide new and gently used toys and books for each and every family who requested our assistance.

Warm wishes,

Charlotte Bornmuller
Secretary

P.S. Your entire donation is directly applied to the service provided; there are no administrative expenses. Because you received no goods or services in exchange for your contribution, the full amount of your gift is considered to be tax-deductible.

Dear Mayor Penn:

This letter is to acknowledge receipt of check number 458223, dated January 15, 2014, in the amount of $100.00, which was presented to me on behalf of Brothers Redevelopment, Inc. at the Englewood City Council meeting on January 21, 2014. This funding which was appropriated through the Aid to Other Agencies will be used for our Paint-A-Thon Program.

We continue to receive letters from clients who have benefitted from our services. These are some excerpts from a couple of letters we recently received:

"You will never know this side of heaven what your gift of painting our house means. We could not have afforded this – even if we saved for an entire year. We were very impressed that you had youngsters painting and were not only supervising them but also teaching them. Starting them out “giving” at this age almost certainly means they will be life-long “givers.”"

"You are all very special and I only wish I could do something special for each of you. There is no way to express my appreciation for the wonderful job you all did from me. I will always remember you each and everyone and especially how pleasant and cheerful you were, smiling and happy through the heat helping someone like me.

I love the way the house looks now. I try to keep the place up, but it would have been impossible without your help. You are a wonderful group. A special “Thank You” to Brothers Redevelopment, Inc. – you made my 84th birthday special!"

While valuable, our programs and services cannot meet the growing needs that exist along the Front Range without assistance from our caring donors such as you and your family.

Again, thank you for your generous donation.

Sincerely,

Jett Martinez

Dear Mayor Penn:

Thank you for your gift of $350 on January 22, 2014 to The Denver Hospice and continued support. For over 35 years, more than 64,000 families have turned to The Denver Hospice for care during difficult times. Your financial support helps us to continue our mission to encircle those facing advanced illness with unprecedented levels of comfort, compassion and expertise.

Amongst our unique attributes as Denver’s leading nonprofit hospice, we have achieved the highest level of recognition for service to Veterans. This We Honor Veterans recognition validates our dedication to ensuring that Veterans—for us, 30% of our patients—have access to quality end of life care.

In addition, The Denver Hospice consistently provides exemplary care by:

- Operating a state of the art Inpatient Care Center, to provide relief for patients with serious pain and symptoms
- Providing nearly $1.6 million in patient care and services above and beyond what is reimbursed by Medicare, Medicaid, and private insurance
- Specializing in anticipatory grief through our Footprints program for children and our Adult Grief Center. We provide support for patients and families as well as the community at large
- Exceeding national benchmarks in pain management and family satisfaction with our services

Your support ensures our compassionate care as we face changes in the health care landscape. We are confident that our people, our services, and our Inpatient Care Center will continue to serve those in need. I invite you to stay involved as an advocate for dignity at end of life. Call on us and share your experience with others.

Sincerely,

Michael Pasquarella
VP Philanthropy

P.S. This letter serves as a receipt for your donation, in accordance with Internal Revenue Service regulations. The Denver Hospice is a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit [EIN 84-0743121], tax-exempt charity registered and in good standing with the IRS. Dear Council members:

On behalf of the Englewood Arts Board of Trustees, I want to thank you for supporting the Strings Attached program with a grant of $300 from Aid to Other Agencies.

More than a hundred Englewood elementary and middle school students enrolled in Strings Attached this year. In addition to the violin, viola, cello and piano classes, Englewood Arts began offering class instruction on guitar back in September. Nearly 40 students are participating.

The program is growing and is strengthened by its highly-skilled instructors: David Short, Jeremiah Sault, Gwen Gravagno and Miriam Kapner. We are looking forward to greater success in 2014.

Thanks again for your grant.

Dear Council members:

Up Close and Musical is very grateful to receive the support of $1,500 from Aid to Other Agencies. Your grant assists our efforts in providing live, artistic experiences to the school children of Englewood. We performed at Bishop Elementary School last October and will visit Clayton in the Spring, as well as All Souls and Saint Louis schools. Your grant also helps Up Close and Musical with its concerts in Hampden Hall on the Englewood Arts concert series. Our tribute to Joe and Penny Shoemaker was given to sold-out crowd on October 5. We are preparing for another successful performance on May 18, 2014, featuring a variety of music from around the world.

Thanks again for helping us bring artistic enrichment to Englewood.

III. STUDY SESSION

Chris Neubecker, Senior Planner, reviewed the proposed Zoning Text Amendment for Non-Conforming Structures. According to a map developed by Staff, there are 104 structures in the City identified as non-conforming due to density. There is no apparent pattern to the location of the buildings. It was clarified that there are two different code sections: 16-9-2 Non-Conforming Uses and 16-9-3 Non-Conforming Structures. The proposed text amendment addresses 16-9-3 Non-Conforming Structures.
At the direction of the Commission, Staff will revise the language regarding voluntary redevelopment and eliminate the duplicate information that currently exists by removing item 16-9-3-B(4).

Chair Brick asked for comments or further consideration on the topic based on the discussion from last meeting. Mr. Roth had concerns about the scope of the change based on the fact that the discussion began because of only two buildings and suggested that MU-R-3-B would be the only zone district to which the amendment should apply. Brick asked for an estimate of the potential number of properties affected, Neubecker estimated that less than 1% would likely be damaged or destroyed over the next 20 years. Including voluntary redevelopment and reconstruction of the same, that number may be closer to 5%. Bleile pointed out that these instances would be only in the event of an accident or incident that would substantially damage the structure. King stated that obsolete buildings would be rebuilt according to current building codes and zoning regulations.

Welker suggested that the difference between building codes and zoning codes needs to be clearly defined. The staff proposal is for a change in verbiage to the current zoning code. It was agreed that there is a need for consistency throughout the code between zoning and building to eliminate confusion in the event of repair to damage to a structure. Neubecker suggested that a sentence be added that regardless of any waivers or other consideration that would be given to a property owner regarding zoning codes, all current building codes would apply.

Chair Brick polled the Commission for their opinion on whether or not the changes should apply to all zones or just MU-R-3-B as suggested by Roth. The majority of the Commissioners feel that the revision should apply to all zoning districts. The duplexes in R-1-A would be subject to the revised zoning code.

It was agreed that these situations would be subject to Staff review on a case-by-case basis in the event that a building is “grandfathered” under the current zoning code prior to reconstruction through the Zoning Site Plan Review process (16-2-9.) The property owner would have the opportunity to appeal any Staff decision through the Board of Adjustments.

Fish and Townley suggested removing the term “practicable” or clarifying the definition of “practicable with existing standards” and state who would make the determination of what “practicable” repair to a structure would be. Neubecker pointed out that the word “practicable” provides some direction for redevelopment. Director White stated that there is a better chance of the site plan meeting the adopted standards if the wording on “practicable” was included. Staff will revise the verbiage as needed and prepare for Public Hearing.

It was agreed that the zoning code should be tightened up to be congruent with building codes in the interest of staff protection and the best interests of the City of Englewood.
IV. PUBLIC FORUM

No members of the public were present at the meeting.

V. ATTORNEY’S CHOICE

Ms. Reid did not have any comments for the Commission.

VI. STAFF’S CHOICE

Chris Neubecker, Senior Planner, reviewed the Longmont field trip and presented photos of the highlights. Discussion ensued on the following features that the Commissioners felt could be implemented in the City of Englewood:

Street Trees – Careful consideration should be given to placement and type of trees installed to prevent obscuring storefronts.

Brick Sidewalks – Sidewalks other than plain concrete create a welcoming view and provide direction for pedestrians with the use of color and texture. Mr. Roth pointed out that these surfaces need to be wheelchair friendly. The address markers for the businesses were set into the sidewalks in front of the doors.

Historical Markers – Capitalize on the history of the City to engage visitors to the area. There is a lot of interesting history in Englewood that could be documented.

Alleyways – Longmont improved their alleyways with adequate drainage, lighting, surface treatments and waste/recycling corrals. Because Englewood has ½ block lots along Broadway, this would not be as easy to achieve here but could potentially have a positive impact on property values. Some of the buildings in Longmont had entrances on three sides including the breezeways. Consideration should be given to expanding those lots and the commercial zoning along Broadway, when buildings are redeveloped. Ms. Townley inquired as to whether EPA funds might be available for enhancing the drainage in alleys.

Breezeways or Paseos – By providing lighting, awnings and artwork, the space is more user friendly and enhances the connection between the main street and the adjacent parking areas.

Art Community – Longmont is pursuing designation as a Colorado Creative District. Incorporating the creative community into the planning process, this activity could be a catalyst for further economic development. Murals and other public art displays were evidently encouraged and it was suggested that this type of “signage” should be mentioned prominently in the sign code.
Director White asked for suggestions for further training for the Commission. Field trips were suggested, possibly to downtown Littleton and other nearby developments. Mr. Fish mentioned possible training related to updating the Comprehensive Plan. Mr. Brick suggested that crime prevention be integrated with planning wherever possible and that there may be resources available to facilitate training.

VII. COMMISSIONER’S CHOICE

Knoth- Felt that the field trip was very beneficial and spoke about comparisons between Longmont and the Broadway corridor. He mentioned the lighting on Larimer Square downtown and the ambiance and definition that the lighting provides to the area.

Kinton – Embrace the history of the City of Englewood and use the history to build a sense of place.

Townley – Engage with Englewood Arts Commission to foster the creative community. It was suggested that they attend a Planning and Zoning Commission meeting to share ideas.

Fish – The funds from the Longmont DDA were instrumental in developing their downtown area. Creative funding would be necessary to implement some of the ideas gathered during the field trip.

Welker – Strong leadership and vision are needed to take ideas to the next step, creating place is important, utilizing MOA (Museum of Outdoor Arts) and history projects would be a starting point.

Brick – The Planning and Zoning Commission has the ability to become leaders on the new Comprehensive Plan in the City of Englewood.

The next regularly scheduled meeting is Wednesday, January 22, 2014.

The meeting adjourned at 8:34 p.m.
